

Dr David Baghurst

Managing Director, Isis Innovation (Hong Kong) Ltd

David studied chemistry at the University of Oxford prior to completing a DPhil. Following two years as a lecturer at Imperial College, London, David joined the Cookson Group as Head of the Advanced Products Group at the Cookson Technology Centre. David joined The Oxford Trust as Director of Industrial Programmes in 1996 supporting the creation and growth of high tech companies, managing technology business incubation premises and business/angel investor networks. David joined Isis in 2002 as Head of the Physical Sciences Group working on commercialisation projects from chemistry, physics, engineering, materials and computing. Since 2008 David has been working on international technology transfer related projects for clients all around the world. In 2011 he moved to Hong Kong to build a network of joint ventures and collaborations throughout Asia. David has an MBA from Warwick Business School and has sat of the board of a number of emerging technology businesses from the life and physical sciences.